The test takes only a few minutes and the results do not represent a diagnosis. Screeners encourage those with below-normal scores, as well as those who still have concerns, to pursue a full medical exam. Memory problems could be caused by Alzheimer's disease or other medical conditions.

Some memory problems can be readily treated, such as those caused by vitamin deficiencies or thyroid problems. Other memory problems might result from causes that are not currently reversible, such as Alzheimer's disease.

Dr. Louis Miele, a member of the American Psychological Association and Certified Professional Dementia Care Provider, conducts Memory Screenings for the Alzheimer Foundation of America and leading Pharmaceutical Companies at Approved Assisted Living Facilities.
